

Welcome to FACTopia!

Find the words which link each fact. Use each word twice to connect one fact to the next.

There are ___ zeros in a quintillion.

About ___ million years ago, our human ancestors had ___.

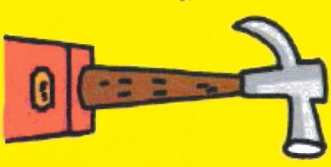

Some animals use their ___ as weapons: Thresher ___ their prey by slapping them with their tails.

___ don't have outer ___, they just have two small holes on top of their heads.

The three smallest bones in your body are in your inner ___ and nicknamed the ___, anvil, and stirrup.

The ___ Museum in Haines, ___, has more than 2,000 hammers on display.

There's a species of ___ that is immune to the ___ of scorpion stings.

There are no ___ in ___'s national anthem.

When kids lose a tooth in ___, they put it under their pillow for the tooth ___, Ratoncito.

The average ___ can understand about 165 ___.

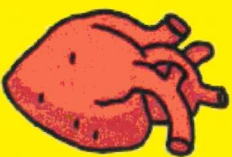

___'s official state sport is ___ mushing.

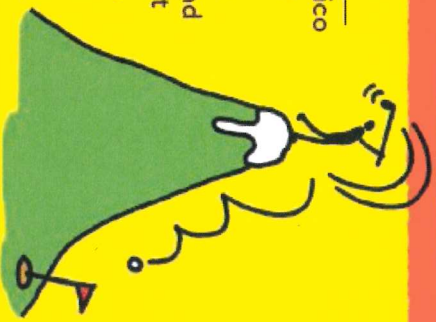

Scientists have used ___ snake ___ to develop new medicines for people with high ___ pressure.

About 2,000 gallons (7,571 liters) of ___ are pumped through the average human ___ as blood circulates around the body every day.

Your ___ will beat about 2.5 billion times over the ___ of your life.

A golf ___ in New Mexico has just one tee—it's on the top of a mountain and the hole is at the bottom, more than 2.5 miles (4km) away.

Hole-y moly!

Words: blood, 18, hammer, dog, sharks, words, ears, Spain, tails, mouse, heart, course, Alaska, venom